Fifty thousand special engines leave the factories of the firm from Piacenza (Emilia), which have acquired a reputation for reliability, sturdiness and easy maintenance both in the amateur and professional fields. The firm has manufacturing plants in 170 countries in Europe and outside Europe, and an annual production of approximately 100,000 engines in the factory in Piacenza. In 1982 and in 1983, IVECO engines have been awarded the "European Engine of the Year" award and the "Autosport Engine of the Year" award. IVECO engines have a reputation for reliability, sturdiness and easy maintenance both in the amateur and professional fields. The firm has 100 agencies in 170 countries. IVECO also has a large, well-stocked fleet of IVECO trucks, and is led by a research and development division that develops both general and highly specialized products covering almost every application area in the motorboat (recreational, sport or professional) and in the motor car (the Renault 5 and the Fiat Tempra).

The sturdiness, the speed and power of the five-cylinder diesel engines, which are designed and manufactured in accordance with international standards for high specifications, have developed by experience in the various fields of marine motor, in heavy work and in the various spheres of long-distance travel. This is supported more in general by our particular concern about safety and environmental issues and in accordance
